THE MONARCHIES OF CONTINENTAL EUROPE.

IIa, 2.—be said one of our city merchants a few days since, when his aid was asked in exhabilisting a bome for the bounders boys of New-York. A bome where, by their honest industry, they can gain a livelihood, and not be sompelled to subsist, either as criminals or panpers—where their natural and acquired evil can be not and overcome by means in harmony with his great law of mind, and where the inuings of a higher and holier nature, traces or which are found in every being, may be satisfied. BY JOHN S. C. ABBOTT. great law of mind, and where the irugings of a higher and holier rature, traces of which are found in every being, may be satisfied.

"Little Devils!" What right has be to call them thus? He whose early life was not like their a, neglected, but shielded by a mother's love and a father's watchful care. Call them devils! Them, made by the tame great Father as himself, in the same image, and which capabilities for the same destiny! How much better than his little boman indernals would be have been irreated with the same neglect, and exposed to the same influence? Trained to theft, would be have been homes? Takended to Faisehood, would be have been treated with the same neglect, and exposed to the same influence? Trained to theft, would be have been homes? Schooled to Faisehood, would be have been treated with the same neglect, and subject to every species of cruelty and self-shness, would be have been the model of purity, knows and obstity we now find him?

But as they fray be, can they not be made better, or at least kept from be coming wors? Heature they are had, shall they therefore be abandoned? God has not dealt thus with us, for "While we were yet sinners. Christ deed for as." And will we do nothing to promote another's salvation?

They are not devile; so far from it, they may become good and useful here, and be numbered with the redeemed of God hereafter. This is the great object to be accomplished—the great end to be attained. And what if it costs money, will it not pay? Boppose the salvation of a soul could be searced at an expense of $1,000, would you not like to make the investment! You complain of the burden of your charity as. Which would you rather do toward puriging the moral necessories of your city? Pay cheerfully, and without calling any hard names, your proper assessment, or go down into those sinus of vice, and there, single-handed, perform your quota of the work? Which would you prefer to take those bighted, corrupted buils of society into your family, thereby exposing your sons and your daugh

The first volume of this new and important series of historical works is new ready. It embraces the history of THE EMPIRE OF AUSTRIA, ITS RISE AND PRESENT POWER.

BY JOHN S. C. ABBOTT.

One volume crown few, cloth. Price $1.50.

This volume appears very opperturely, for Austria is just now a most prominent actor among the great nations of the world, and is the center of universal interest. Mr. Abbott has adopted a plan which enables him to give her most eventful and tragical history in a peculiarly attractive manner. He presents a historical history in the properturely, the full and connected history of the empire, but possessing, also, the personal interest of hierarchy. From The N. T. Express. February 17.

In this day of generalizing and g. couping in literature, it is singular that no author before Mr. Abbott has thought of using the rich and remantic materials easily accessible for a series of histories of the momenthes of Europe. The outline of each is blocked out in the histories of the reveral kingdoms, and Caciyle, in his brilliant sketches accompanying the biography of his Prasian is room has shown as how to interviewe much of the wird and pleuracques from remote periods with the story already familiar. The writer of this volume had taken a birds eye view of the European dynatics in his birtories of Bounquete and the French revolution. He begits the present series of "Monnrethes" with a memoid of Austria, treating the emplect as if he were writing the life of an individual, and in a figure, personifying the power, whose thirth, growth, strife with opposition and decay, he undertakes to describe.

There is much of the strange and wonderful in the history of veillance and judicial and prison discipline. Nine out of every ten over 5 and under 14 may be, to say, the least, made safe and uneful members of society at an average expense of #50 per head, as a first outlay, while to convict and hang one of them would cost #500, and perhaps #5,000. Who will add in carrying the Gospel to the thousands of youthful heather in our midst! If other hear the toil and care and burden of the work, certainly it cannot be asking too much of you to sid, of your solid, it forward.

Controlled. med to what pertains to the rise and development of the monar-chy, and these events that promoted or retarded its growth. More of the philosophy of the true histerian is in requisition for this work than has been demanded by any other of Mr. Abbett's looks. He has here manifested a far and liberal spirit, without the partition enthusians abown heretofore, and has furnished us with a volume of unique character, written with clearness, method and race.

The other volumes of the arrival. The other volumes of the series will follow at intervals three or four menths. Published by MASON EROTHERS.
